

What do YOU think?

The drawing below shows what could happen to form a new tree lined central boulevard in place of the ugly Newmarket and Blueschool Streets, but we need your views.

Up to half of the existing traffic will be diverted onto the proposed link road running from Morrisons to Edgar Street.

This initial boulevard concept has been developed by experts in designing city streets, working with help from local taxi drivers, bus operators, disabled groups, businesses and other local people. You'll see that they have taken inspiration from places like Aachen in Europe where these types of streets have worked well for many years.

Now we want to know what you think.
